

People, Places, and Things... horses on North 21st Street!

Frank Frownfelter had his polo ponies stabled behind his home at what is now 100 North 21st Street. In the 1950's, when this photo was taken, the front door of the house faced 21st Street. It now faces Walnut.

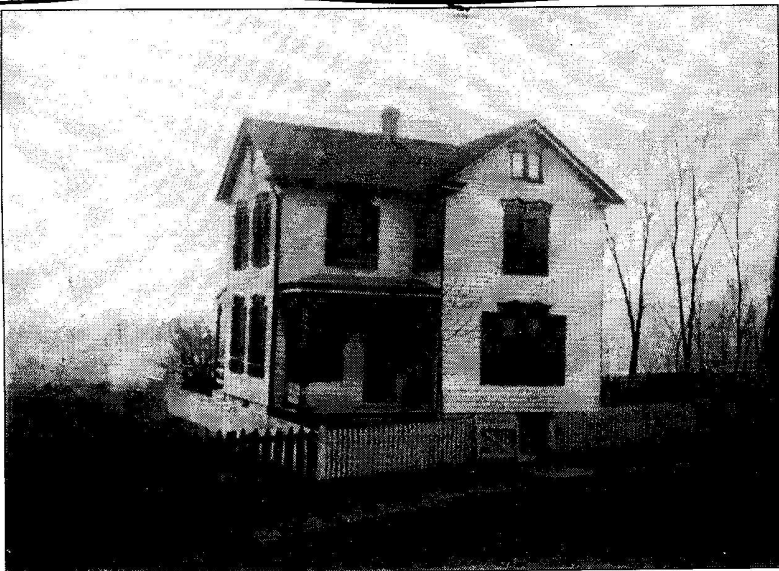

To the right are Quiz, Point Blank, and Norma Jean.

On match day, the horses would be taken by van to the polo field just beyond 36th and Market Streets.

Several generations of C. H. children "visited" the horses while going to and from school. A few even got to ride them (including riding through the cemetery).

Photo courtesy of Paul Sheaffer

left: Church of God's original parsonage at 122 N. 21st and above, the house as it was this past summer of 2009.

Across the street from the Church of God, on Church Street, (North 21st Street, since 1922), stands the Parsonage of the Church of God. Please get out your magnifying glass to better admire the decorative trim around the windows. The trim was "lost" during a window replacement or siding updating.

For the longest time, this house did not have indoor "facilities". When Oscar Shulte came to the Church in 1967, he encouraged the congregation to sell this home and purchase one on Mayfred, near Irwin's Dairy. That house was sold later, too. By this time, most ministers wanted their own home in order to have some equity with which to buy their retirement home.